MEET 25 GEN Z'ERS
CHANGING THE WORLD

Sabrina Carpenter

So much more than just a Disney vet, Sabrina Carpenter has proven to be a multi-threat with a bona fide music career and a fan base that rivals those triple her age. With two albums already under her belt and another one on the way, Carpenter is no stranger to hustling. It's in her blood. Some would argue that she's already made it, but she feels that there's always something to improve on, something new to try, and something to keep her on her toes. She won't have made it until she says so, and we have the feeling she'll redefine the concept of success not only for herself but also for those who follow. How sweet it'll be.

Tell us everything you want people to know about you in one sentence.

If I want dessert, I'm gonna have dessert.

What has the past year of your life taught you?

To take more risks. Even if they don't work out, the risk is still worth the wisdom you gain.

Where do you want to be in five years?

I'd like to be sitting next to Rihanna on a couch watching That '70s Show.

What do you hope other generations learn from yours?

I think my generation is truly looking to break down barriers and not do things just because it's acceptable, but because it's what we believe in. My generation also has an incredible ability to accept and love others. I hope other generations are inspired by that.

What's one quality about yourself that you are genuinely proud of and how has it helped you professionally?

My work ethic. It has enabled me to balance my music with my acting and still keeps me wanting to challenge myself and work harder. Once, I heard Bruno Mars say he was just getting started—and that was after he had a few Grammys under his belt. Ever since then I realized, if Bruno's still just getting started, then I'll always be just getting started.
