

Takeover Tuesday Playlist: Sabrina Carpenter Goes Beyond 'Almost Love' With Rihanna, The 1975 & More

Welcome back to Takeover Tuesday, where each week, Billboard taps chart-topping artists and tastemakers to compile their very own playlist exclusive to Billboard's Spotify account. We give the artists free rein to base the list on whatever subject they choose. The only rule? Make it as creative and unique to them as possible.

After starting her singing career at the young age of 11 and growing up in the spotlight on Disney Channel, Sabrina Carpenter has come into her own as a musician. The triple threat first jumpstarted her singing career with the release of her debut EP, Cant Blame A Girl For Trying, in 2014, before fully captivating the music industry with her sassy-yet-sultry vocals and two full-length albums, 2015's Eyes Wide Open and 2016's EVOLution.

Now, the talented 19-year-old is gearing up to release her third studio album, Singular, teasing the album's Nov. 9 release date following a theatrical performance of her newest catchy single, "Almost Love," on The Late Late Show With James Corden Oct. 1. Ahead of the album's release, the singer created a Takeover Tuesday playlist of 25 tracks that play on her latest single's title, featuring love songs from Rihanna, The 1975, Arctic Monkeys, BØRNS and even Hozier's new EP Nina Cried Power in its entirety.

"These songs all represent that visual kind of love you can see in music, if that makes sense," Carpenter says. "These are some of my favorite artists take on love and the kind of music I want to play in the movie soundtrack of my life. It's a little upbeat, it's a little emo, but it's all love."
