"It's not easy to protect your childhood when people all around the world are watching your every move and mistake."

OLIVIA HOLT, 20

The singer and actress racked up 100 million streams with single "History," and represents the best of the Disney Channel's future.

You have three big movies coming out this year. Do you feel ready for fame?

"I've told myself the last couple years I never want to make or be a part of a project that doesn't impact me in anyway and it's a major goal of mine to make other people feel impacted too. Along with inspired, and to humor them, and to move them. I hope that whatever comes along with fame, that all of that is the focus and ultimate dream, always."

What's your biggest fear about becoming famous at such a young age?

"Being young and in the limelight is a challenging thing to experience. You have to protect and live as much of your childhood as you can. It's not easy to do that, when people all around the world are watching your every move and mistake. I'm lucky to have my family and solid core group of friends around me to keep me grounded and to go do things that any young adult right now would go do."

Who's your celebrity crush?

"Dev Patel. I'm ready to get married whenever he is."

What do you wish people knew about you?

"I don't take one thing in my life for granted. I truly believe that every mistake I've made, every person I've met and every place I've traveled to has all happened for a reason. I also don't take life too seriously. We're only here for such a short amount of time it's so important to take that time and live it so fiercely. I have to dare myself to do things I wouldn't normally dare myself to do. Moral to this message: I put ketchup on everything."
